ASHLAND PUBLIC SCHOOLS

AND PROF. BRADNER.

The commencement season of the Ashland Public Schools has come and gone, and it has left in the minds of most of the patrons of our schools that the year just past has been one of the most successful in the history of the schools. Much of his success is due to the faithful and untiring efforts of our superintendent, Mr. James W. Bradner. Mr. Bradner assumed the leadership of our Public Schools one year ago, and with a handicap that was almost enough to daunt the courage of the most fearless. This was in the shape of the financial end of our school system. There was not enough money in sight to meet the current expenses of the schools and it was necessary to put the question to a vote in order to raise the taxation, to provide money to meet the deficit. The proposition met with many obstacles and it was necessary for Supt. Bradner to lead the fight in favor of the increased taxation. The result was a decided victory for Mr. Bradner and the public schools.

Since then, Mr. Bradner has worked into our school system, numerous ideas of his own, which have had a decided tendency to better the condition of the schools. He has engendered into pupils the spirit of enthusiasm and a love for their work, which they did not heretofore possess. This was shown in the annual literary contest between the two High School societies and in other ways. He has also established a splendid system of athletics and both boys and girls have taken a deeper interest in physical education than they have for many years.

In all this work, the development of heart and soul power has not been lost sight of. Mr. Bradner's idea is that study is to give one power, discernment, insight to know the truth, the reality, the divine quality of the thing we see or hear—not to load one down but to lift up. In this work he has had the co-operation of parents, faculty and Board of Education, and this has aided largely in the success achieved.

Plans are now being formed for next year. Let us all uphold the hands of our progressive superintendent and thus aid him in bringing our school to a still higher plane of usefulness. — Ashland Independent.

"THE POOR, DEAR, OLD, FOOLISH DEMOCRATIC PARTY, WHY IT FAILS."

—John Sharp Williams.

Senator John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, who was the Democratic leader in the House before Underwood, and who berated his colleagues in the Senate Wednesday for quarreling over the selection of reserve cities and other matters, declared the party was beginning to do just what it could be counted upon doing every time.

"The poor, dear, old, foolish Democratic party," said the Democratic Senator, "is going through the same game that she can be generally trusted to go through soon after she gets into power."

"That is the Democratic party true enough," he continued. "That is its history. That is what led Speaker Tom Reed to say in 1894 and 1895: 'You can't last long because you are not accustomed to governing anybody or anything; you cannot govern the country because you cannot govern yourselves. You are incompetent.' —Washington Post. (DEM.) (Dem.)

THE INSURANCE COMPANIES' DEMANDS.

In accordance with its custom of opening its columns to all sides of public questions the Courier-Journal gives the insurance companies another hearing this morning.

It may be noticed, however, that Mr. Allison's fervid paper, like others on that side of the issue, ignores several points of legitimate interest. There is nothing for instance, about the excessive expenses of the insurance companies' methods of doing business, which is as material a factor as the fire loss in fixing rates. Nor is there anything to disabuse the public of the conclusion that the companies, having left the State before any attempt had been made to hurt them by means of the Glenn law, are now trying to frighten the State into a repeal not only of that law, but of the Zorn law, thus freeing themselves of any State regulation whatever.

In private some of the representatives of the companies say that they are willing to operate under reasonable State regulation; but if that is true they should formulate an act embodying something of what they regard reasonable regulation. The Courier-Journal is anxious to help them repeal the Glenn law, but it is unable to understand why both law and the Zorn law should be repealed, with nothing to take their place, leaving the companies absolute masters of the situation.—Courier-Journal.

MANAGER JOHN J. McGRAW OF NEW YORK GIANTS.

Manager John J. McGraw is the highest salaried man in baseball. Last year McGraw received $30,000 as salary from the New York club and will get the same amount this year and for three more for the new contract he signed last winter at that yearly salary has four more years to run. McGraw's income from baseball last year was $83,500.

McGraw was born in Truxton, N. Y., April 7, 1873. He played his first professional engagement with the Oleum, N. Y., team in 1890. After two seasons in the minor leagues he entered the National league as a member of the Baltimore team in 1892, and remained with that team until the end of the season of 1899. In 1900 he played with the St. Louis Cardinals. The following year the American league placed a team in Baltimore, with McGraw as manager. John remained in Baltimore until he signed as manager of the Giants in 1902. On July 19, 1914, he will celebrate his twelfth year as pilot of the National league champions. During his career as a player McGraw was a crack thirdbaseman, and since taking up the managerial end of the game he has developed a number of the greatest stars in baseball.

PSYCHOLOGICAL

(New York Sun.) Citizen Outwork, hat in hand, accosted the professor as he came out of Candid House: "I have a wife and four small children—"

"You only think you have," said the professor; "your state is merely psychological."

"I haven't had any work for six months, since the factory—"

"Fie," cried the professor, taking off his eyeglasses and waving them in a wide gesture of depreciation; "don't you know that nonemployment is merely psychological?"

"My wife and children are actually hungry—"

"Nonsense, my dear sir; hunger is merely psychological."

"My brother has just been 'fired' by the X., Y. and Z. Railroad; the railroad people said they had to reduce expenses."

"How ridiculous; expenses of railroads are merely psychological. So is it your brother's discharge?"

"Professor will you lend me a dollar? When better times—"

"This is most unbecoming language. What times could be better than these? Times are merely psychological. So is your assumed need of a dollar. Learn to know the need of mankind and to find that need in yourself. Does mankind need money? Do you need money? Then find the money in yourself. Everything and Colonel House and my Mexican policy is merely psychological. Money to a victim of the merely psychological state called 'out of a job' Goodby. I wish you more psychology and a better frame of mind."

MAY PROVE FATAL

When Will Maysville People Learn the Importance of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first; But if you find 'tis from the kidney, That serious kidney troubles may follow:

That dropsy or Bright's disease may, be the fatal end, You will be glad to know the following experience.

"Tis the statement of a Maysville citizen.

Mrs. Della Lunsford, 328 E. Front St., Maysville, Ky., says: "I attributed kidney trouble to a strain. I had sharp shooting pains through my kidneys and a dragging down feeling through my hips. I had dull headaches and dizzy spells and often if I had not caught hold of something for support, I would have fallen. I was in that condition for several years, up one week and in bed the next. I finally began to notice symptoms of dropsy and in a short time I was suffering from that trouble. My feet began to swell and my hands were at times the same way. At night I was restless and always felt tired. I read of a similar case being cured by Dr. Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a supply. Before long I was completely and permanently cured. Dr. Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. I am glad to confirm my former endorsement of this remedy."

WHAT REGULATION COSTS NEW YORK

Two Commissions Spend Interest On Sixty Millions Each Year.

The two Public Service Commissions of New York State, the so-called New York City Commission and the so-called Up-State Commission, are spending, in the exercise of their functions, about three million dollars a year of the commissioners' money. It is very well to have somebody to curb the so-called rapacious corporations. It is very well to see that watered securities are not issued in the future, but sixty millions of these watered securities at five per cent interest must be wiped out before these commissions have paid their freight. Three million dollars a year is a very large sum to spend for an idea.—Thos. N. McCarter in May Aera.

THAT BUSINESS DEPRESSION

An Ounce of Fact Against a Pound of Psychology.

(Philadelphia Ledger.) President Wilson tells the business men of America that while there is a trade depression it is "merely psychological."

Can an extra dose of psychology give back to 2,000,000 railroad owners that $8,000,000 which their properties have lost in eight months this fiscal year, compared with the year before the Wilson regime started?

Is it only a dream or a concrete fact that 1,000,000 workmen are now out of a job?

Can a mental state account for the amazing reversal in America's international trade figures, where a monthly excess of exports ranging up to $50,000,000 has turned into a balance against us of $10,000,000 for April?

Does mere sentiment reduce our steel mill output to 60 per cent. of its capacity? Was it hysteria that blew out 15,000 Pennsylvania coke ovens?

No, it was not a "merely psychological" notion that unloaded American-made traffic from 230,000 freight cars and put them out of commission. Baldwin's didn't discharge more than half their employees out of pique.

Building operations in the United States have not fallen greatly simply to create political sentiment. Our bankers are not sending shiploads of gold to Europe to spite somebody.

When securities have been liquidated in 18 months to level $2,000,000,000 below their former value the country is not suffering psychologically, but concretely.

It is an outrageous mockery for those whose excessive legislative meddling is largely responsible for our present trade ills to pretend that the people who have suffered the loss and who are out of work are themselves to blame.

The President says there is "nothing more dangerous for business than uncertainty." But his party has left business in no uncertainty whatever, except as to the extent of the calamity which it may inflict.

CHEWING GUM MATERIAL.

It is estimated that 300,000,000 packages of chewing gum, each containing an average of five pieces are sold annually in the United States. These 1,500,000,000 sticks of gum, placed end to end, would extend 71,025 miles, or two and one-half times around the world. If stretched into a thread one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter, it would reach a distance of 497,875 miles or from the earth to the moon, wrap three times around that satellite and back to the earth again. If the physical energy used in chewing this material's supply of gum could be reduced to foot-pounds and applied to machinery it would furnish power in comparison with which Niagara Falls would be insignificant.

WHY FARM LABOR IS SCARCE.

(Lexington Leader.)

The editor of the Leader, taking one day to Mr. Newman, Kentucky's Commissioner of Agriculture, about the various problems which confront the modern farmer, and many incidental subjects as well, asked him this question: "Why is farm labor so scarce?"

The Commissioner's answer was both prompt and enlightening. "The difficulty," he said, "is not so much with the scarcity of farm laborers as it is with the conditions under which thousands of farm hands are asked to work. The old 'from sunup until sundown' idea is no longer attractive to the average man. Men do not want to get up and eat before dawn and labor on until it is too dark to work in the open and then devote their supper by lamp light. There are thousands of able bodied young men who would really prefer to remain in the city, but they are attracted to the city where they can get about the same return for their labor in a nine or ten-hour day. When there is a readjustment in farm life and farm finances, based upon a sane working day, the farmer, as a rule, will be able to get all the help that he needs, and he will really get about as much for his money, in a shorter day as he now gets for the long day, because the human frame can accomplish so much, and no more, in twenty-four hours."

SENSIBLY-DRESSED GIRL MAY ALWAYS FIND STEADY EMPLOYMENT.

Chicago.—Young women with good dispositions, average attractiveness and with no slit skirt, low-cut necks or flat curls gummed on their cheeks need never lack employment in Chicago, provided that they possess a reasonable degree of competency. This was the result of a discussion of the subject here, by employment heads of a number of large department stores and mail order concerns and experts from the Women's Trade Union league and several civic bodies.

One employer said that the greatest problem is the middle-aged woman who has grown careless of her appearance. Another declared that it was fresh girls. A third said that the hardest kind of girl to find a place for was the college girl with no vocational training.

Farmers have joined with bankers and merchants in marking up this large sum of money to encourage the growing and showing of farm products, and trips to Washington. # NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

"It Ain't a Menagerie; Pull Down the Fence!"

WASHINGTON.—From an obscure corner of the congressional directory and a not overly well-known portion of the state of Indiana, steps into the limelight, one Henry A. Barnhart, member of congress from the Thirteenth district of the Hoosier state, and leader of a constituency of 258,674 souls.

From May 1, 1914, until time shall no more, the Indiana congressman will be canonized on the pages of fame as the man who discovered that wild animals no longer roam the grandiose sidewalks of the District of Columbia, and the man who accordingly introduced a resolution in congress asking that Secretary Lane of the interior department pull down the high picket fence that surrounds his bailiwick. With a flowing wealth of legislative parlance, including sonorous and euphonious phrases, the "gentleman from Indiana" introduced his resolution in the house the other day.

It seems that at some time or other, the picket fence surrounding the Department of the Interior building, on the block bounded by Seventh, Ninth, F and G streets northwest, has held the attention of the Indiana congressman.

Lifting one hand majestically toward the skylight, Mr. Barnhart turned to the house, which waited with bated breath.

"Mr. Speaker," he announced, "this is my resolution:

"Whereas, wild animals no longer infest the business district of the national capital and horses, cattle and hogs are no longer permitted to roam at large therein, and,

"Whereas, ours is a nation of civilized people without need of restraint by barrier of high fences; therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled, that the secretary of the interior be, and hereby is, authorized to remove the iron fences now surrounding the buildings occupied by the department of the interior and the general land office."

Tests Show the Value of Fresh Air Schools

HAT school children who are taught in fresh-air classrooms advance more rapidly in their studies and make greater improvement in weight and strength than children in regular classrooms is a conclusion demonstrated by Frank H. Mann of New York before the sociological section of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The speaker reported on a series of experiments carried on jointly by the New York committee on the prevention of tuberculosis and the board of education, in which three groups of children were studied to note the effect of fresh air upon them.

In one group the children were placed in fresh-air classes and were fed during school hours with milk and crackers morning and afternoon; in the second group the children were left in the ordinary classroom under regular conditions. Every effort was made to eliminate or equalize in the comparison such variable factors as age, home conditions, physical condition, school conditions, nativity, etc. The two groups of children in the fresh-air classes were all undernourished and anemic at admission.

The results of this experiment, extending from September to June, showed that all of the poorly nourished and anemic children in the fresh-air classes gained in weight, red corpuscles in the blood, general nutrition and physical tone. The gains were made for the most part independently of the home environment and of the financial conditions of the children's family, suggesting that the association between poverty and malnutrition in school children is not so close as has been commonly assumed, and that cases of extreme poverty with lack of necessary food at home are not nearly so prevalent as has been frequently stated.

It was also demonstrated that, even without school feeding, fresh-air classes can be run with advantage to the children of poor families, although the greatest benefit was obtained where extra feeding of children was employed.

Effort to Stop Traffic in Habit-Forming Drugs

IN a desperate effort to stop the traffic in habit-forming drugs in the United States, such as opium, cocaine, morphine and heroin, congress will, within the next few weeks, place upon the statute books a law that is more drastic than anything ever before attempted along this line. This law, the consideration of which by the senate committee on finance has been delayed for many months, will require that every person who imports, manufactures, sells or gives away opium, morphine, coca leaves, cocaine or any of their derivatives or preparations shall register his name with the collector of internal revenue of the district.

Further, he shall not sell this opium, cocaine, heroin or morphine except in pursuance of a written order on a form to be issued in blank for that purpose by the commissioner of internal revenue of the United States treasury department. This order shall be kept on file for a period of two years by the dealer so that it may be accessible for inspection by federal and state officials. The purchaser of these drugs must keep a duplicate of the form for similar inspection.

In other words, if a citizen is addicted to the use of opium or cocaine, and purchases either of these drugs, he must be on public record as a drug fiend and the dealer on record as a person who is willing to sell to the unfortunate. The law will make certain exceptions in the use of these drugs for purely medicinal purposes when procured on a written prescription from a physician.

"Business" Is Now Dead for Capital's Beggars

"PANHANDLERS" who hang out under the trees along Pennsylvania avenue a few blocks from the treasury have come to the conclusion that "business" here is "dead." The "first aid" ticket of the Associated Charities is blamed by the beggars. The nickels and dimes obtained from citizens of prosperous appearance during the old rich years have gone. Instead the "panhandler" now is given a "first aid" ticket.

When somebody devised the ticket plan packages of the tickets, done up like mileage books, were issued to the business and professional men of Washington.

The "first aid" ticket is the printed application of a citizen for help on behalf of some individual who is supposed to need it. So far the plan has worked well, hence the complaint of the beggars that "business" is poor.

There was a time in Washington when an alert panhandler could net $4 to $6 on any pleasant summer evening—all in money, mostly nickels and dimes. But now times have changed. Within the past few weeks Washington has been flooded with "first aid" tickets and the tired business man, instead of shelling out his nickel or his dime, tears off a "first aid" ticket and goes his way rejoicing.

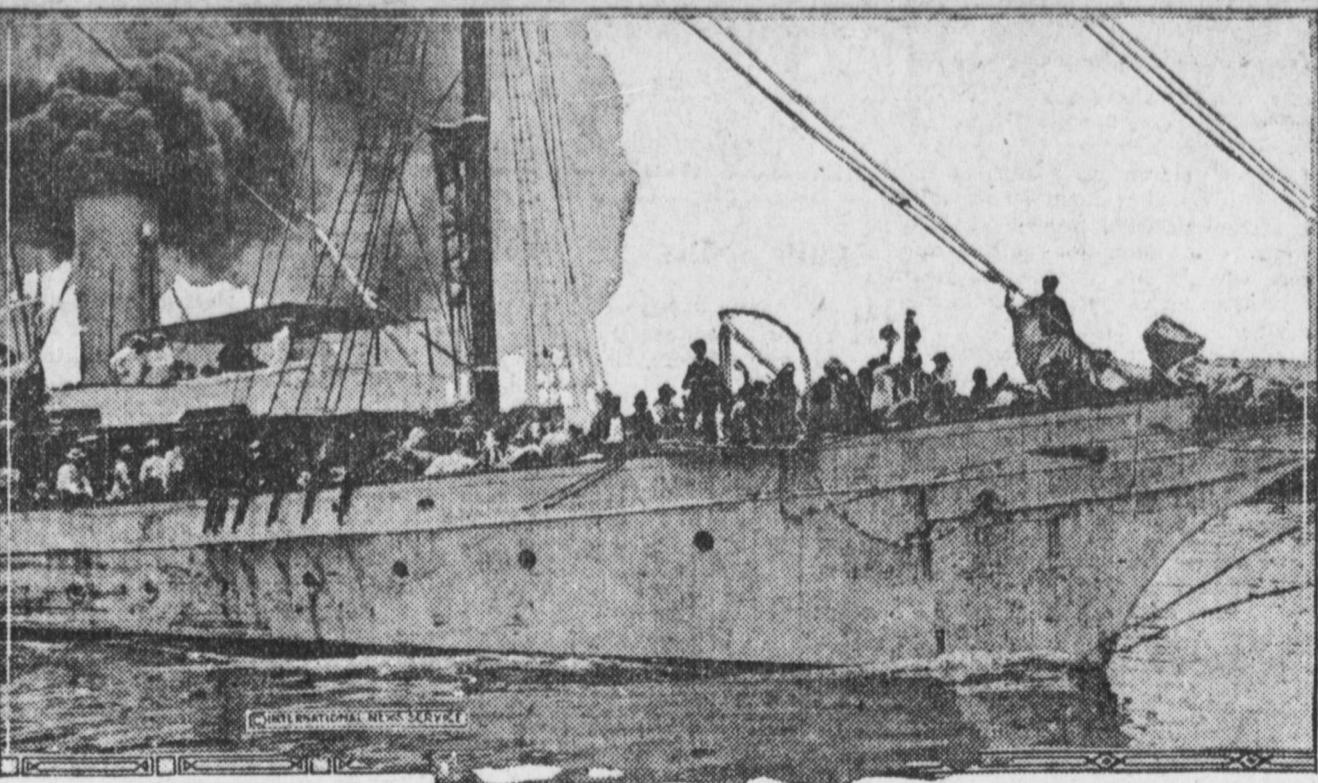

The officials of the Associated Charities are pleased with the plan. They say that a man really needing help will come to them, get what he requires and subject his case to the investigation of the charity workers. If he's a professional he wants cash and cash only and he never comes near.

Remarkable Progress.
"That's our general superintendent son of the president—he began at the bottom and worked up—started in as an oiler, right after he left college!"

"When was that?"
"In he graduated last June."

MEXICO'S BEVERAGE KNOWN AS PULQUE IS DEADLY DRINK

Responsible for Degradation and Misery of Peons.

ADULTERATED IN THE CITIES

Cultivators of the Maguey Plant, From Which Intoxicant is Made, Live Like Feudal Lords—Little Cultivation is Required.

Kansas City.—Dispatches from Vera Cruz say that after the recent battle between the American marines and the Mexican soldiers the remnants of the troops of General Maas raided a couple of cantinas or liquor shops and were soon wandering about the streets of the city intoxicated, says the Kansas City Times. It is fairly safe to assume that the shop's supply of pulque, the national drink of Mexico, was confiscated; for the peons fill themselves up with this strange drink on the slightest provocation.

Cultivating the maguey plant, from which pulque is made, is one of Mexico's most lucrative industries, ranking almost on a par with gold and silver mining, coffee growing and the cultivation of tropical fruits and products. The plant grows to best advantage and greatest height on the table lands of Mexico. The plain of Apam, not far from the City of Mexico, is noted for producing the best pulque in the republic.

Acres and acres of the huge plants can be seen growing on the great haciendas. The trunk of the plant is a pineapple-shaped bulb with roots widely spread out into the ground. This bulb is called the "corazon" or heart, and contains within a soft vegetable pulp. From the outside huge blades 10 to 15 feet long radiate, armed along their edges with sharp, strong points, and culminating at the top in a longer and stronger spike.

Being a desert plant, the maguey requires none of the cultivation and care that is necessary in the cultivation of other crops. From the time of its planting until the sap rises in its heart little or no attention is necessary. In setting out a plantation the Mexican divides his land into 15 or 20 sections. One of these sections he plants at one time, another at another, until he has so arranged the tract that one bunch of magueys will mature one year, the next bunch the ensuing year and so on, until a sort of continuous chain of pulque producers exist, giving an inexhaustible supply year after year, and an equally inexhaustible supply of dinero to the owner of the hacienda. No plant, however, will give forth sap until its tenth year, and then only upon the very eve of blossoming. It is rarely allowed to bloom, as this destroys the sap. The Mexicans have a favorite couple extolling the virtue of this plant, which says:

Comida, bebida,
Casa, y vestido.

This means that the maguey plant is "food, drink, house and clothing." Such an assertion is a little exaggerated, but it is a fact that from the maguey one can obtain pulque, tequila, an intoxicant somewhat resembling Scotch whisky; mescal, like tequila, but stronger; fuel, thatching material for the adobe hut and needles and thread. By carefully cutting off the sharp spike at the top of each maguey blade and following the strong fiber which extends from it to the heart of the plant, sewing material of a rude sort is obtained. The poverty-stricken Indians in the valleys of Mexico use this primitive needle and thread extensively.

When sap time comes the sap gatherers cut into the bulb from the top and digs out the corazon a few inches. He then covers the cavity with a maguey blade and goes to the next plant, which he treat in a like manner. Within two or three hours he returns to the first plant and finds the bulb filled with sap—aqua mel, or honey water, it is called. Into this he dips the small end of a queer receptacle made from the Mexican gourd. It is really a rude siphon. He sucks the sap into the gourd. Then he opens a large bag made from the skin of a pig, which he carries on his shoulder, and pumps the sap into it from the siphon.

When newly taken from the bulb the sap is thick, white and sweet and tastes something like sweet cider. In this state, while not yet pulque, it is very agreeable and not the least intoxicating.

For three or four months repeated visits are made to every plant tapped and the sap withdrawn. When the last drop has been taken from it the great plant droops, its blades sag to the ground and it becomes a dirty brown. It is then dug up and hauled away to be used as fuel and thatching and, perhaps, needles and thread.

One load after another of this agua mel the gatherer gathers in the pink pigskin to the building on the hacienda where the pulque is made. It is poured into vats made of cowhide. The hair side of the hide is uppermost, so that the liquor is poured on the hair.

A small quantity of fermented sap is placed with the fresh, and soon a great white foam forms on the top and rises into a sort of pyramid as fermentation is complete. It is a thick, sour liquid, sickening to one who has not cultivated a taste for it. There is nothing that can be compared to the taste of pulque, nor, for that matter, to its smell. That is usually enough for most visitors to the country. But it is said that good pulque, after one has grown accustomed to it, is an exceedingly agreeable beverage.

Once fermented, the pulque is loaded on the hacienda's own trains and shipped to its destination. Often a peon will own a few maguey plants somewhere, and it is a common sight in the City of Mexico to see one of the owner of the ranch.

The owners of some of the large haciendas live like feudal lords on their vast estates. They have a large retinue of servants and retainers.

They are men of great wealth and power. Each hacienda is a little town in itself, with its collection of adobe houses and stores, all the property of the owner of the ranch.

The opening of sluiceway waters of the Two Bays Mingle in the Canal.

Buzzards Bay—By the opening of a sluiceway in Foley's dike, the chief obstacle that remains in the Cape Cod canal, the waters of Cape Cod bay and Buzzards bay mingled for the first time recently and the cape itself became an island.

August Belmont, president of the canal construction company, poured together bottles of water, one taken from Cape Cod bay and the other from Buzzards bay, as the sluiceway was opened, and said:

"May the meeting of these waters bring happiness and prosperity to our country and save some of the misery which the waters of the cape have caused in the past."

The canal is not expected to be ready for traffic for several months, for there is still considerable dredging to be done. The dike will be removed, probably on June 21, with the fifth anniversary of the beginning of the work on the canal. By July 4 small vessels will be able to go through the new waterway.

The opening of the sluiceway was for the purpose of permitting herring to pass through the canal. They abound in Monument river, over the course of which the canal runs for some distance. Shadrach Smith promised Mr. Belmont to catch for him the first herring that passed, through the sluiceway.

LESSON FOR JUNE 7

COMING OF THE KINGDOM.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 17:26-27.
GOLDEN TEXT—Lo, the Kingdom of God is within you.

"Three young provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta," says a New York financial journal, "have already made Winnipeg one of the greatest primary wheat markets of the world. In 1904 they raised 58,000,000 bushels of wheat. Five years later they produced 150,000,000 bushels. In 1913 the crop approximated 200,000,000 bushels. At the present rate of progress Canada must soon pass France and India, and stand third in the line of wheat producers. Ultimately it will dispute with Russia and the United States for the first position. Wheat has been the pioneer of our development. Undoubtedly it will prove the same with Canada. In the last calendar year our trade with Canada amounted to 497 million dollars. Only with two countries—the United Kingdom and Germany—is our trade greater. No vivid imagination is needed to see what the future development of Canada means to the people of the United States.

In answer to the boastful Pharisees (v. 20), Jesus plainly told them that he himself is the kingdom, and that that kingdom was in their midst or "among you," see (v. 21) margin. Their question was a flippancy, one of unbelief, and to it Jesus makes a characteristically brief, but clear reply, that partook of the nature of a rebuke. The kingdom would not come with trumpets and drum. They could not say, "Lo here! Lo there!"

It is coming not to be spectacular, arresting the attention of some who in turn brought it to the attention of others. The authorized rendering "within you" does not imply that the kingdom already existed in the individual lives of his questioners. Subsequent teaching of Jesus shows that he here refers to another and a final coming of the kingdom, at the time of the final coming of the son of man.

11. The Visible Son of Man, vv. 22-24. The kingdom in its outward form was rejected by the Jews, John 1:26, 27. In its spiritual form it is now in the hearts of believers (Rom. 14:17), but he who was rejected with contempt will one day be sought after, though in vain, Matt. 23:37-39. During the time of his absence many shall claim to be Christ (v. 23), but we are not to believe such claims. History has abundantly proved and fulfilled this prophecy. When he really comes there will be a sudden publicity (v. 24), that shall flash from one corner to the other of the heavens, Matt. 24:27; then "every eye shall behold him." "So shall the son of man be in his day." This instruction Jesus gives to his disciples. Men shall search for him, a time when he shall not be present as he then was. After the false ones will come a day of revelation when the whole heavens will reveal him and all will know it.

Finality of Events.

11. The Day of the Son of Man, vv. 25-37. Before that day comes, however, he must suffer and be rejected, but following that rejection men will marry, carry on merchandising and merriment as in the days of Noah and those of Lot. In the days of Noah and of Lot there came a sudden halt in these activities and a judgment of flood and fire, even so "after the same manner shall it be in the day that the son of man is revealed," v. 30. This refers to the finality of events when the kingdom of God comes by way of judgment. When he shall come there will be a sudden halt in these activities and a judgment of flood and fire, even so "after the same manner shall it be in the day that the son of man is revealed," v. 30. This refers to the finality of events when the kingdom of God comes by way of judgment. ## COMES OF NAVAL STOCK

Charles Johnstone Badger, in command of the fleet at Vera Cruz, was born in Rockville, Md., on August 6, 1852. He was the son of Commodore Oscar Charles Badger and Margaret M. Badger. An appointment at large to Annapolis was given the present rear admiral by President Grant in 1869, and four years later the young sailor graduated with the title of midshipman.

In July, 1874, he was commissioned an ensign, was given the title of master in November, 1879, and was raised to the rank of Lieutenant (junior grade) in 1883. In 1886 he became a Lieutenant. From September, 1873, until July, 1875, he was aboard the Narragansett, engaged in making a survey of the Gulf of California, and from October, 1875, until December, 1875, he was on duty at the navy yard in Washington.

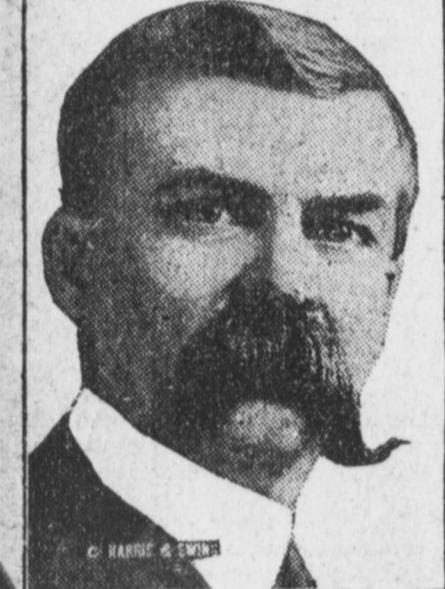

He then was transferred to the torpedo boat Alarm for six months, then to the Asiatic station, with the Ashuelot, Alert, Monocacy, and Monongahela, and in December, 1879, was assigned to special duty with the Bureau of Fisheries.

He then spent some time with the coast survey steamer Endeavor and A. D. Baché, and was switched to the Yantic on the north Atlantic station. In October, 1882, he was on duty at the Boston navy yard, and then was ordered to the fish commission steamer Fish Hawk.

Perhaps the most dramatic part of his career was that of taking part in Schley's relief expedition to find Greely, who was lost somewhere near the North pole. Badger was the executive and navigating officer of the Alert, being second in command.

He was in command of the naval forces on the water front in San Francisco during the earthquake, and helped the stricken city greatly by aiding in the transfer of naval supplies.

MRS. JOHN LIND, WOMAN OF THE WEST

Among women of today a personality of particular interest is that of Mrs. John Lind, wife of President Wilson's recent envoy to Mexico. Mrs. Lind accompanied her husband on his diplomatic mission into that country, and with him spent several months in the city, which is now a center of interest in the world.

Before her marriage Mrs. Lind was Miss Alice Shepard. She comes of old Pilgrim stock, her ancestors having come over to America in the days of the Mayflower. The Rev. Thomas Poletiah Shepard, one of her forefathers, was many generations ago one of the pastors in the early American colony. Another built the first boat that ever plowed the waves of Lake Erie.

Mrs. Lind herself was born in Wisconsin. The spirit of the West permeates her tastes in large degree. She loves the freedom of outdoor life, delights in fine horses, and is a good rider and expert swimmer. In talking with Mrs. Lind one realizes that it is probably to her athletic tendencies that she owes her clear complexion and her splendid health. She is the mother of two boys and two girls, but has retained her youthfulness to a remarkable degree.

Mrs. Lind says that she has no hobbies, unless they are her husband and children. She loves politics, but she has never had a desire to take active part in it. She says she may be old-fashioned, but that she prefers being behind the throne rather than on it.

When her husband was governor of Minnesota, she was perhaps more interested in legislation and in problems of state and municipal government than in the discharge of the social duties that usually constitute a wife's part in the career of a husband who is in public life. Mrs. Lind has always been interested, too, in sociological problems, and for a long time she worked as a voluntary visitor for the Associated Charities in her town.

A COMMON LANGUAGE

By F. H. MASON.

"For goodness sakes! If that old Mexican cow ain't been and gone and at my glory-de-John rose."

I looked up from my gardening and saw my next door neighbor—usually the most amiable of women—literally shaking with indignation, on her front porch, while a cow was on the grass plot below, contentedly munching the last of the gloire de Dijon.

Mr. Farleigh took a pot containing a small, withered palm from the porch rail, heaved it at the cow, and exclaimed: "Drat the beast!"

The pot broke innocently some way from the cow, and the animal went over to it and examined the palm. It was too dry for her taste, however. She evidently preferred sweet, succulent rose bushes.

"Shoo!" Mrs. Farleigh followed the exclamation down the steps, shaking her apron vigorously as she went. The cow walked leisurely away, notwithstanding the pieces of broken flower pot that my neighbor sent after it. "Ain't that the limit?"

I had intended to keep out of the controversy, and had buried myself behind a hakea, but a hakea forms a poor shelter, and this last remark was evidently intended for me.

"It's hard," I replied sympathetically.

Of course I said just the wrong thing. Anything I might have replied would have been wrong to one in Mrs. Farleigh's mood.

"Hard! Hard!" she shouted in disgust. "I wasn't thinking of the cow's digestion. It's my glory-de-John rose that worries me. I've tended it all winter, like a mother, and it was just coming into bloom. Them Mexicans have no right to keep cows in a respectable neighborhood."

The Mexican was a bête noir to the neighbors. He had arrived recently, and bought four lots. On these he was keeping half a dozen cows, and running a small dairy farm. He seemed to be circumventing the city ordinance, which prohibited one person keeping more than one cow, by distributing the ownership of the animals among his children. The bad feature about the affair was that the family were casual about letting the cows roam off the premises. They had owned a large ranch in Mexico, before the revolution, and did not understand being confined to four city lots.

"It's too bad. Why don't you go over and see them about it?" I suggested mischievously, for I knew the Mexicans understood little or no English.

"I will," Mrs. Farleigh said decidedly. "I have just cause for complaint."

"You surely have," I agreed. "It's the proper thing to do."

Mrs. Farleigh trotted across the street, her anger rising as she went, and pushed the button beside the Mexican's front door.

I was bad enough to take up a point of vantage behind a large leptocephalus, to watch the burlesque, for I imagined my neighbor had not the Spanish.

The Mexican woman appeared, and my neighbor started the attack. "Your old cow is dead and at my glory-de-John rose," Mrs. Farleigh shouted.

"Gloria de Juan, señora!" the Mexican woman exclaimed, in surprise. Juan was her eldest son.

"De wauen seurona nothing. Your cow, cow, cow," each time she spoke the word, Mrs. Farleigh pointed a finger viciously at the offending animal, which was contentedly ruminating over the flavor of rose bushes near by, "your cow has been et my glory-de-John rose."

The Mexican woman was clearly puzzled. "La vaca gloria de Juan! No, no. Ordena la vaca."

"Can't you savvy English?" Mrs. Farleigh asked indignantly.

"No hablo inglés."

"You have no English, eh?" Mrs. Farleigh resorted to pigeon English. Tapping the Mexican woman on the chest with a finger, Mrs. Farleigh demanded: "You no savvy?"

"No sabe."

"For the land's sake. And I've been and left my housework to come over here and give you a bit of my mind." The humor of the situation dawned on Mrs. Farleigh. She placed her hands on her hips, and, with arms akimbo, laughed uproariously.

The Mexican woman stared in astonishment; then she caught the infection, and joined in the laugh. There, on the Mexican's porch, the two women stood, each seeming to try to outdo the other in her hilarity. After a time, they became week-end from the effort, and sat on the top step and continued to laugh, wiping the tears that ran down their cheeks with the corners of their aprons. They had found a common language.

Royal Talent.

American women who consider themselves well educated will be silenced by a recital of the accomplishments of the new queen of Albania, although it is doubtful whether she's much better informed than other royal consorts.

She speaks English, French, Spanish and Italian; is a good pianist and also plays both guitar and harp. She is able to play duets with her husband at concerts and has both composed and written words for children's songs. She also is quite an artist, and before the birth of her little daughter was a famous pedestrian.

How many American women can compare with this list?

Helping Other Girls.

Sixteen hundred girls in New York, under the name of Girls' Protective League, are now working together in New York to help save other girls. It is believed that lack of fun and recreation are responsible to a great extent for the misfortunes of one kind or another that befall girls.

Youth Fails to Warble and Lands in Lockup

NEW YORK.—When James Smith, eighteen years old, of 19 Mechanic street, New Rochelle, was sentenced to 60 days in prison for petty larceny by Justices O'Keefe, Herrman and Salmon in special sessions he said he had been led to steal by going to church for the first time in his recollection. Recently his father, who is a postman, took him to task for not being a church attendant.

"Son," said the elder Smith, "you're going to the bad. Go to church instead. You'll never get ahead in this world until you do."

So on the last Sunday in March James joined the faithful who went into the mission at 35 West One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street, Rev.

Richard Bolden was holding forth on the beauty of a righteous life. Deeply touched, James knelt with the others in prayer.

While he was wiping away the moisture from his eyes his glance was caught by the minister's hat and coat in an ante-room.

Remembering his father's remark about getting along in this world by going to church, James tiptoed softly to the garments.

On his way out three overcoats found their way across his arm. James walked sanctimoniously away until he reached One Hundred and Thirty-first street and Madison avenue.

There he was stopped by Patrolman Hart, who noticed a sheaf of sacred music protruding from the coat that belonged to the minister.

"Stop!" said the policeman. "Where are you going?"

"To church," answered James. "I sing in the choir."

"But what are you doing with those coats?"

"Taking them to give away to the poor."

The policeman fingered them suspiciously and then he looked more closely at the music.

"This music is in Latin," he exclaimed. "Can you sing it?"

"Sure," replied James, who knew several Italians.

"Then sing it now," ordered the policeman.

James was reluctant, declaring he was not accustomed to singing Latin on street corners. At length he yielded to urgent prompting. The policeman listened as long as he could.

"That'll do," he said finally. "You'd better come along to the station house and resign from the choir."

Perhaps they will ask him to sing at the prison chapel.

No More Fur on Upper Lips; Barber's Swan Song

C HICAGO.—"In the course of a few years," sighed C. Albert Bucks, Chicago's most veteran barber, the other day, "whiskers will be as extinct as the American buffalo. And so will barbers. Whiskers are disappearing, and they are very seldom to be met, even in a barber shop. I cut whiskers in the early '70s when a barber of today wouldn't understand."

Mr. Bucks has been cutting whiskers since the year 1869, and this is his official swan song.

"Look," said he, indicating the bearded face of a youthful customer in the chair beneath him. "Once the American youth was a fur-bearing animal, as luxurious on the face as the German, Spaniard or the Alaskan yak. He used to wear whiskers all over, and few faces in those happy days were complete without at least one set of trimmings."

"Have a shampoo?" inquired Barber Bucks, as his youthful customer straightened out in his chair. The shampoo being spurned, Mr. Bucks continued in a more melancholy strain:

"In those happy days a barber had to be an artist. There were whiskers and whiskers; some grew sideways, some up and down and some on the bias. To cut whiskers then required such skill which few barbers own nowadays."

"Will you maybe have your hair singed?" inquired Barber Bucks of the youthful customer.

"I will not," responded the youthful customer, promptly.

"A young man then was as proud of his whiskers as of his wife. He used to come to his barber every day to have them treated scientifically. He used to brush his hair from the back out and make it stick from his forehead like this" (illustrating).

"But as the years passed I noticed that this was a bad climate for whiskers. They didn't seem to grow good. A man coming over from the old country with a beautiful crop would lose them in three or four years. Nowadays a young man comes in here once in awhile with a dinky mustache as large as your littlest finger and wants it fixed up. Ach, to think of the kind that used to be!"

The Mexican woman was clearly puzzled. "La vaca gloria de Juan! No, no. Ordena la vaca."

"Can't you savvy English?" Mrs. Farleigh asked indignantly.

"No hablo inglés."

"You have no English, eh?" Mrs. Farleigh resorted to pigeon English. Tapping the Mexican woman on the chest with a finger, Mrs. Farleigh demanded: "You no savvy?"

Peaceful Married Man Was Almost Shanghaied

P HILADELPHIA, PA.—The papers had just been coming out with big evening headlines of reports of the taking of Vera Cruz. A certain citizen of the neighborhood of Seventeenth street and Susquehanna avenue was going home along Broad street from Columbia avenue about nine o'clock in the evening. He was full of war spirit.

As the enthusiastic citizen reached the south corner of the Second regimental armory, at Broad and Diamond, he noticed a crowd about the doorway in the middle of the building. He sped up to see what was the excitement.

As he shouldered his way through the crowd a husky lad in state blue grabbed the citizen by the arm.

"Come on in!" he shouted. "The regiment needs men!"

The enthusiastic citizen dragged back. "Men?" shouted he, in turn.

"Well, don't that qualify you," argued the guardsman. And then he coaxed: "Ah, come on in, sport. Your country needs you. Ain't you got no patriotic?"

The man from Seventeenth and Susquehanna took wild umbrage at this.

"I can kick the man who says I ain't patriotic!" says he. "But I'm a married man! And I don't stand for no shanghai-ing!"

The married man indignantly wended his way along Susquehanna avenue home. "Well, what do you know about that?" he growled, under his diminutive mustache. "Shanghai-ing! On a respectable uptown street—respectable people! Say, what do you know about that?"

Woman at Ball in Pantalets Causes Sensation

BOSTON, MASS.—Boston society is gasping over the first appearance of pantaloons in the Back Bay. They were worn by Mrs. Lorraine Lovewell at the Coplay-Plaza. Had she but known how much attention her new gown would attract, Mrs. Lovewell might not have worn it, she said.

Skirts with the pantaloons effect have been seen in Boston, but it was the first time a garment of this kind had come into view here. Those present gazed at it almost continuously throughout the evening. Some women were simply dumfounded. Others said it was not so bad, and added that they may later adopt the style.

The men liked it. Among those most interested was ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald. The new gown, which Mrs. Lovewell brought here from New York, is really a beauty. The skirt is pink crepe

"AND HER NAME WAS MARY"

London, June 5.—The King and Queen held court at Buckingham Palace last night and in spite of all precautions a militant suffragette gained access to their presence and caused an interruption in the presentations.

As she was passing the King the suffragette dropped to her knees and shouted: "Your Majesty, for God's sake, do not use force!"

The woman was attired in court dress and her action caused profound astonishment. She continued to admonish the King, but her words were inaudible, as the conductor of the band in the gallery, quick to observe the incident, signaled the band to play louder and the woman's voice was drowned. She was immediately removed from the room and handed over to the police. The name of the woman is not known, and close inquiries are being made as to how she obtained a card of admission.

The scene, which gave a shock to those in the immediate vicinity of the royal circle, was brief, and the assembly generally had scarcely any knowledge of what was transpiring.

Whether the woman was one of the invited guests who sympathized with the suffragette movement, or an intruder who gained admission by forged card is still unknown. It is difficult, however, to imagine how any person could have gained access to the court on a forged invitation, as the police had knowledge of a conspiracy to approach the royal presence and every guest and every carriage arriving at Buckingham Palace last night had been subjected to close inspection by detectives—a unique precaution, and one that caused considerable delay and not a little indignation or irritation in court circles.

Last night's incident is calculated to produce a feeling of still greater exasperation in the public mind and renewed demands for strong measures to suppress the suffragette agitation.

London, June 5.—Officials of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant organization, deny responsibility for the incident at Buckingham Palace last night when a woman interrupted the presentations by throwing herself at the king's feet.
